Dear Klugier

I have found that "PR" may be pull request in GitHub.
It is possible to recognize that in the present day GitHub is very much in vogue. Even I use it, because it is a good tool.
However, in U++ the official way for submitting change proposals and issues is Redmine.
Your effort to propose GitHub is remarkable. However, without first solving the U++/GitHub integration problems that exist, doing U++ source management through GitHub not only doesn't add value, it adds extra work.
The contradictory messages, what they cause, is that in the end the reliable way to propose improvements and changes that we all use is through this Forum.
I sincerely believe that, first and foremost, the integration of U++ and GitHub, also thinking about how SVN fits into this equation, has to be solved. If a way is found that Mirek supports, I assure you that I will push, among the best, the implementation of GitHub in U++.
