Hello,

I see one problem with the changed mechanism related to package selection in package manager. Right now each package downloaded from "UbbHub" add additional entries to the drop box in which user can specify which packages should be displayed. With two packaged downloaded form UppHub I have 12 entries. Example below:

Let's imagine if I will have 20 or more packages. It will be addition 36 entries, which will make the DropList very hard to use.

My question here - can we simplify it by adding UppHub assembly instead of creating separate one for each package? Also, if I mess something I don't know which option is the default one - similar to the good old "Main packages of first nest".
