As I proposed early UppHub should not be under mirek-fidler. It should be in ultimatepp organization as separate repository. The organization is easier to find and it is common good.
Right now we have several people in organization, so we can give them rights to maintain the list.
Also, I would like to have everything in one place. So, I do not jump to mirek-fidler when I am look at ultimatepp repository.

You are right, corrected.

I still see that package manifest is integrated with the ".json" file. What is your plan here? Do you plan to let repository construct manifest and keep single link on the list?

Well, the idea is

a) this README.md is not to be visited by users, so it does not really matter
b) you can edit it directly in github

Would be nice to have some hind of json validation on CI/CD to do not break the list. This can be implemented later.

Adding check to autotest...
