hmm... How do I convert it into the package? Because I really don't wish to dl CodeBlocks juz so that I can compile other packages.

Usually, it is very straightforward process: You create an empty package (by adding it to your project "uses"), copy source files to the directory and add them as package files ("add package directory files") and you are practically done (as long as you do not want to add some glue code encapsulation, which really is not necessary).

Of course, problems can appear on the way, but they are way specific to list them here all now...
