I guess I now have an obligation to upgrade my linux

Didier:

I started getting the same problem again and after some google research on general clipboard issues between X and Wayland some suggested installing wl-clipboard and (possibly) removing xclip if installed.

That appears to have fixed it for now but I'll keep an eye on it.

EDIT: Nope, the problem is still there.

Backtrace is very similar to yours. It was doing it on more than just a copy, even ctrl+h was triggering it.
