I think I found something interesting: when compiling in "verbose", all paths to UppHub packages get included although I have only included one in my application package dependencies.

So if I have same packages present in UppHub and in another nest (both nests present in nest config paths) ... things will probably get nasty

Well, while I doubt this really can cause problems (or fix your problems), but just to be sure I have now tried to fix the builder so that only nests with packages that are used are in include path now. Please test.
