

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

This doesn't look good to me. I doubt that this is a problem with clangd itself.

And it is really simple really:

So the only input is 'tu', the rest are legal libclang calls. And checking the rest of code, 'tu' is either nullptr or result of translate....

