
Subject: Re: Documentation generated by Doxygen
Posted by Werner on Tue, 02 Jan 2007 13:59:29 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I had a look at it. I deem it a valuable supplement to the Ultimate++ documentation. But it can't replace the latter. While Doxygen seems to me much better structured to get an overview and to find a topic quickly, the "real information" can only be found in Mirek's documentation, the examples, the references, and the tutorials.

Werner
