To be honest, I don't know what work best, but it's probably not necessary. A 1x1 transparent image (which I actually changed to a white dot) is quite easy to do.

Of course, for the future, how would I change the cursor image when I hover over a button, for example? Would I need to have a pointer to the window and call its cursor function again?