This feature is incredibly niche and I doubt it will make it in, but still, I have a use case where the content of a package is preprocessed.

Right now I have to take great care that the files names before and after the pre-process are the same and no new files are added.

A right-click option for a package would be great that would scan the folder, add new files and ask me if I want to discard files that are no longer available.

Basically a dynamic package file list.
