I'm trying to implement SUBJ in my app, but I'm always getting a Help --> Search submenu, which I didn't ask for, and I do not need. My own Help --> About submenu doesn't work, I guess, because of this "Search" stuff.
You managed to disable this "Search" in TheIDE somehow, but I couldn't figure out how ... :)
Could you please share your secret with me?

Hard to say :)

I believe that they are adding those unwanted items based on menu name. For starters, try to rename Help to something else...

Renaming "Help" to something else helps ... "Search" bar disappears and my own menu starts to work, although I'd prefer to have menu item named "Help"...
Another strange thing is that my first menu item "File" gets replaced with the application menu (submenu is mine).

Nothing like that happens to the TheIDE. And you do not seems to have any MacOS-specific code ... :)
This is a little bit weird ...

I believe that it really is just about names... In any case, any research here is most wanted... :)

It would be great to have extra-search capability. The problem is that the only one my own menu bar under "Help" (called "About ...") just doesn't work when I have the "Search" bar. This is a little bit inconvenient ... Otherwise I'm just fine with this extra "Search" bar ... :)
