Subject: GetInsertedId does not work for all data types.
Posted by Alboni on Fri, 18 Oct 2019 11:34:59 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

The Sql::GetInsertId() call always gives an integer value of 0 if the key is a Date.

Subject: Re: GetInsertedId does not work for all data types.
Posted by mirek on Sun, 20 Oct 2019 08:25:05 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Alboni wrote on Fri, 18 October 2019 13:34The Sql::GetInsertId() call always gives an integer value of 0 if the key is a Date.

Uhm, I did not even knew that you can have Date primary key with autoincrement... What DB is that?

Mirek

Subject: Re: GetInsertedId does not work for all data types.
Posted by Alboni on Sun, 20 Oct 2019 10:54:09 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

I am using MySql. No there is no autoincrement on the key. I used GetInsertedId() in many cases to check if the Insert succeeded.
I am also seeing the relevant MySql function seems to be integer only.