I'm searching for a good and free GUI builder so I can make small projects and get used to work with GUI. In the past days I've been testing wxwidgets inside CodeBlocks, but one of the things that holds me from start doing anything is the fact that its been painfully hard to make a plugin for the GUI builder so it can have a new item to be dragged and placed under a frame. Is it possible with ultimate++? Also, there are lots of big projects in wx, can ultimate++ be used in large projects too?
