To make forum a little bit clearer,
what about adding bot that would automatically check(for example every 1day)
to move any forum topic(eg [BOT2ARCHIVE][DONE(orFIXED)]topic...) into Archive.
BOT2Archive or 2ARCHIVE or ToArchive or something like that.
Meant for obsolete or not-needed-any-more topics, but should still be in archive just-in-case.
Topics should be marked as that by whoever created it and in rare cases(as it is manually now) by moderators.

For example i posted this topic back then, simply because i was not aware indexer and anything related to code jumping - was in transition and was not meant to leave it that way, this could be an ok example to move it to archive - since other questions were not answered there.

Another example - this time not meant to be moved into archive is:
i posted this some time ago,
and it is not meant to be moved into archive simply because it has an 'evergreen' usefull info - in that case a handy - more practical, Navigator window.

Hello luoganda,

From my point of view, ancient posts are very valuable since they are a great source of information:
so they all have to stay available to search requests
