I noticed that theIDE creates a dir named 'theide' in every dir from which it is called. This dir is left completely empty every time. If this happens intentionally, why? And if not, is it possible to fix that, because it's quite annoying, you end up having tons of these dirs lying around without having any purpose. It's not only theIDE that behaves like that but also the BuildAll program, of course this one creates a 'BuildAll' dir.

I suspect only POSIX systems are affected.
