Subject: Linux releases...
Posted by mirek on Mon, 30 Oct 2006 15:58:21 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Well, while we are slowly getting ready for the next major release, which most likely will be delayed to Jan 2007 to get GTK look integration (so perhaps it should be 2007.1 version?), there is still one recurring problem - Linux releases.

While Daniel (unodgs) make a good job releasing windows dev version of U++ each week (well, almost , Linux releases has stuck somewhere once again.

I hoped that we should accompany each win32 release with Linux .rpm and .deb (and possibly source with fixed makefile). 3togo, what is the status? Anybody could help?

Mirek