In Ultimate++ we have assemblies and packages, nests. What is project then? And what is the idea behind "export project" and when it could be useful? I tried it for my "duplicate package" idea but it copies all the related packages. And I got lost between those terms.

I think the idea is to extract all packages/sources related to single project.

I am not sure about its usefulness, it is just one of things we (well, Tom have added because it needed it for some job...
