Subject: Use U++ in Internet Explorer as ActiveX control?
Posted by jtegen on Thu, 02 Mar 2006 00:49:08 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Newbe questions.
Is it possible to use U++ to create an ActiveX control that can be run inside Internet Explorer as an extension? Are there any code samples or simple "applets" that does this?

Subject: Re: Use U++ in Internet Explorer as ActiveX control?
Posted by mirek on Thu, 02 Mar 2006 04:40:47 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

jtegen wrote on Wed, 01 March 2006 19:49Newbe questions.
Is it possible to use U++ to create an ActiveX control that can be run inside Internet Explorer as an extension? Are there any code samples or simple "applets" that does this?

I believe that ActiveX is in fact successor of "OLE Control". I hope this helps:

http://upp.sourceforge.net/srcdocOleocx$en-us.html

Mirek