Well, we have scored another small victory...

U++ website is now automatically refreshed each night based on svn content.

That e.g. means that if you commit any documentation, it will be on the website the next day.

(and now some backup solution and then let us do nightly builds infrastructure readers. I am sure your visitors will be excited to submit documentations on your website since they can already check it out the next day. More success and I hope more readers will submit documentations.
