As there still do not seem to be any progress with automated releases, I was rethinking the strategy and have these new ideas:

- forget about releasing anything else than .deb and win32. We should be able to do both in ubuntu64 - the only problem is to fix win32 makeinstall to work in wine

- then, using new export, let us try universal posix src package.

And another tidbit:

- let us think about automated upgrade in theide from google mirror. That would solve a lot of issues.
