It finally happened.

Google intends to push their own OS, designed for netbooks, sometime in 2010. It will be published as open source later this year.

Blog announcement here.

That's bad for our privacy. I don't like the idea to store documents, photos, data, etc. online. What's wrong with surfing the web from your favourite O.S. and favourite browser? I think google is trying to control everything(including our mind).
