
Subject: composite oriented programming in c++?
Posted by piotr5 on Mon, 13 Jul 2009 23:10:36 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

those knowing java probably also heard of qi4j. I'm wondering if someone ever tried something similar in c++. I guess with macros it could be possible. but then, is there any ide which could support such a framework, at least theoretically? I can imagine that to the debugger and to any code-completion mechanism (like Assist++) it would look much too complicated with all the generic gluing together of unrelated atomar fragments...
