I would like to do 11.11 release within 14 days if possible. There was some delay with moving U++ server, but now everything is nice and (almost) working.

I have gone through redmine (www.ultimatepp.org/redmine). Before release, I plan to resolve all "immediate" issues, most "urgent" and check "high" (possibly demote them to "normal").

I would like to ask everybody interested to go through the "Normal" priority issues and check whether there is something that in your opinion is needed for the next release.

When RM is cleaned, I will signal green light and it is "GO" then...

Maybe ask Honza if the RM #58 is actually solved? Would be nice to have Ubuntu 11.04 working out-of-the-box before a new release...

OK, this one seems to be solved....

One more thing: It would be nice if all examples are tested...
