I always had problems with Linux desktop as it felt sluggish to me...

Interestingly, this experience completely changed yesterday after installing nvidia driver AND adding

Option "RenderAccel" = "True" to the xorg.conf.

What makes me wonder why while ubuntu otherwise install everything else, this important issue is left at stupid unaccelerated VESA settings..

Starting from that point, X11 perfoms wonderful - I even, for the first time, have feeling like it is actually FASTER than Windows...
