Description

It's seems that we can obtain appropriate tool-tip colors for GTK3 apps:

```
Gtk_New("tooltip.background");
    SColorInfo_Write(GetBackgroundColor());
Gtk_New("tooltip.color");
    SColorInfoText_Write(GetInkColor());
```

Instead of:

```
Gtk_New("tooltip.background");
    SColorInfo_Write(GetBackgroundColor());
        SColorInfoText_Write(GetInkColor());
```

Now the font color is appropriate and looks similar to native system tooltips.

Patch attached for whole change scope...

On how many distros and themes have you tested?

I remember trying this, problem is that while often you seem to have it correct with one of them, it breaks completely with another.

I remembered these kind of problems for the GTK2, but when I use the fix it works fine for all KDE GTK themes. Probably worth checking on other themes as well..
